SHOPPING

Atlanta is one of the top 10 retail markets in the country and the shopper's paradise of the Southeast. From malls to neighborhood shops, there is something for everyone. Just six miles north of downtown, Buckhead houses two of the metro area's most upscale malls. Since 1959, Lenox Square has served as the Southeast's premier shopping destination, anchored by Bloomingdale's, Neiman Marcus and Macy's, and features 250 specialty stores such as Louis Vuitton, Burberry, Fendi, A/X, Ralph Lauren and Prada. Just across Peachtree Street from Lenox, Phipps Plaza is anchored by Saks Fifth Avenue, Nordstrom and Belk. Phipps Plaza offers more than 100 stores, including Tiffany & Co., Giorgio Armani, Gucci, Tory Burch, Versace, Vince, Valentino and Bottega Veneta. In Midtown, the 138-acre Atlantic Station entertainment and retail complex showcases unique establishments such as Swedish clothing retailer H&M, superstore IKEA and the city's only West Elm home store.

Neighborhood Nooks

The city's neighborhoods are great places to find antiques, art galleries, arts and crafts stores, and boutiques. West Midtown, from Chattahoochee Avenue down to the Howell Mill Road/ Marietta Street intersection, boasts many hot spots for designers and antique lovers, boutique shopping, and the Westside Provision District, which features Anthropologie, Atlanta MADE, Jonathan Adler, Seed Factory, J. Crew and more, plus chef-driven casual and fine dining. The Virginia-Highland area is known for local boutiques and interesting shops. Little Five Points keeps the best eclectic shopping in town and Castleberry Hill includes galleries, as well as No Mas! Hacienda, featuring Mexican imports, accessories, lighting and furniture.

DINING

Looking for a dining recommendation in Atlanta? Just ask the locals. Dining is one of Atlanta's favorite past times.

Here in Atlanta, our award-winning dining scene is reinventing Southern style with locally-sourced menus and down home inspiration. Over the past five years, 45 Atlanta chefs have been nominated as semifinalists for the James Beard Awards.

But Atlanta's dining story isn't just one of sheer numbers. Eateries opening in Atlanta cater to the neighborhood, providing a warm welcome and inviting ambiance to invoke the feeling of dining at a friend's house, rather than a restaurant. The city's chefs are passionate about supporting nearby farms, with meats and produce sourced locally.

In the new kitchen of the old South, revisit favorite recipes of generations past, as Atlanta chefs get back to the basics of Southern cooking. Dig into the chow chow at Empire State South or take a bite of the pickled vegetables at Miller Union. Visit Watershed on a Wednesday night for their mouth-watering fried chicken. Chef Ford Fry is steadily building an empire in Atlanta, with several wildly successful restaurants already open or coming soon. Fry brings high-quality, sustainable seafood to landlocked Atlantans with The Optimist.

Guests to the South often ask where to go for the best traditional down-home Southern cuisine. Established favorites among tourists and locals include institutions like Mary Mac's Tea Room, serving "classic Southern food in the heart of Atlanta" since 1945; and Pitty Pat's Porch, a downtown landmark named after Aunt Pittypat Hamilton from "Gone with the Wind." For upscale Southern fare, venture to Paschal's and try the Paschal brothers' secret fried chicken recipe. The Varsity, the world's largest drive-in, offering "naked dogs walking," will forever remain an Atlanta staple.

These are just some of the ingredients that made Atlanta an exciting dining destination.

ACCESSIBILITY & CONVENIENCE

Atlanta began as a railroad terminus. It's still a transportation hub, but with a 21st-century, global approach.

Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport is the busiest airport in the world with direct, nonstop service to more than 150 U.S. destinations – 80 percent of those within a two-hour flight – and more than 75 international destinations in 50 countries from six continents. With the airport less than 20 minutes from the heart of the city and everything Atlanta has to offer, visitors can roll into town without a car via easy public transportation on MARTA or taxis, limos and SuperShuttle.

Atlanta is one of the most accessible cities in the U.S. with more flights from more locations coming into Atlanta than any other airport. Atlanta is not only home to the country's busiest airport, but it's also number one in the world. Atlanta's new international terminal, which operates 40 gates of its own, makes international travel a breeze, and delivers the shortest processing times for international arrivals of any airport in the U.S.

When it comes to driving regional attendance to your event, Atlanta has long been heralded as the hub of the southeast, and is better positioned to drive attendance than other cities in the south. While Atlanta is a distinctly southern city, it sits a little further north and a little further west than you might realize -- it's actually as close to Ohio as it is to Florida, and to St. Louis as to Washington D.C.

Here in Atlanta, our compact convention and entertainment district is at the center of it all. Surrounding the Georgia World Congress Center and Centennial Olympic Park are award-winning restaurants, unique event spaces and great hotels. For many groups, the walkability of downtown reduces the need for shuttles

HISTORY

Take a walk through Atlanta's history with significant sites around town. You'll find plenty of unforgettable experiences that trace the story of Atlanta — from a fledgling railroad community to a thriving international city.

The Atlanta History Center features 32 acres of gardens, wildlife trails and woodland areas, as well as historic homes and a museum offering exhibitions on the Civil War, African-American heritage and Southern folk art, with a wing dedicated to the 1996 Olympic Games.

The area of Sweet Auburn was the center of black enterprise from the 1890s to the 1950s. Auburn Avenue runs through this historic district, offering stops such as the Sweet Auburn Curb Market, with an array of locally grown foods and unique creations.

The Martin Luther King Jr. National Historic Site is located on Auburn Avenue; and is composed of a visitor center; his tomb and that of his wife, Coretta Scott King; the MLK Jr. Center for Nonviolent Change; his birth home; and the restored historic and new sanctuaries for Ebenezer Baptist Church.

The Jimmy Carter Presidential Library and Museum features a replica of the Oval Office during Carter's term and includes exhibits that chronicle his journey to the presidency.

The Atlanta University Center is a consortium of six African-American educational institutions dating back to the years following the Civil War.

The Center for Civil and Human Rights presents the legacy of the Civil Rights Movement in the context of today's global human rights issues.

Historic Oakland Cemetery, established in 1850, is the final resting place of more than 70,000 Atlantans and prominent guests who impacted the city. Notable figures buried here include Atlanta's first African-American mayor, Maynard Jackson and golfer Bobby Jones, as well as "Gone With the Wind" author Margaret Mitchell.
