

ETHICS – Does it still exist in South Africa?

Some commentators have linked the recent Steinhoff saga to the broader ethical challenges facing South Africa. The integrity of some people in key positions of authority in both the public and private sectors is being questioned. What is happening? Have we lost our way? What do we need to do to get back on track? What can we do to make a real difference in our communities?

You are invited to join Blouberg Rotary Club as we hear from two local leading experts on the subject.

Lea Annandale

Lea is a self-employed business ethics advisor and Associate of The Ethics Institute. She has over 30 years of experience working in Government, which includes the departments of Home Affairs, Defence, Independent Police Investigative Directorate (IPID), and the National Treasury. In addition to various governance roles, she assisted in establishing ethics and risk management units. She joined the University of Pretoria as Business Ethics lecturer in 2001 and was offered a similar position at the UNISA School for Business Leadership (SBL) in 2004, where she is still appointed as contract lecturer today. Lea has contributed to a number of publications, which includes the Ethics Risk handbook recently published by The Ethics Institute. Lea will discuss ethics concepts, theories and decision-making. She will also give examples of typical ethical dilemmas in the workplace and her views on whistleblowing.

Steven Powell

Steven Powell is head of ENSafrica's Forensics Department. He is a renowned specialist white-collar crime prosecutor and forensics lawyer. Steven specialises in leading forensic investigations that result in successful disciplinary and criminal proceedings against offenders, as well as the recovery of losses in both civil and criminal matters. Steven has been appointed to act for the South African Asset Forfeiture Unit to execute a multitude of restraint and forfeiture orders to recover the proceeds of crime flowing from corporate fraud, drug and abalone smuggling. Steven will share some startling, thought provoking, thoughts, on the lack of Ethical practices in Corporate South Africa.
